

City of Corpus Christi Water Department Receives Drinking Water Recognition Program Award from the Texas Commission on Environmental Quality

The Texas Commission on Environmental Quality (TCEQ), through the Texas Public Drinking Water Recognition Program recognizes the effort, dedication, and contribution public water supplies make to the state and to protecting the health of all citizens. The program is extended to all water systems in the state. Each year water systems in Texas are recognized for their outstanding performance for the preceding calendar year.

The purpose of the award is to recognize the commitment to protecting public health, to focus public attention on the importance of water facilities, and to provide opportunities for water system management to interact with each other, national organizations, and the TCEQ.

The City of Corpus Christi Water Department was chosen to receive a 2009 Public Drinking Water Recognition Award for Innovative or Proactive System. Representatives from the TCEQ will present the award to City representatives on Tuesday September 15th, 2009 during council session.

Congratulations to the entire Water Department for their combined effort that made this award possible!
